The last two months have been challenging for everyone in our community and has placed pressures on our university and on individuals in ways that we have not previously experienced. During this time, you have remained focused on finding ways to keep our university moving, particularly with respect to meeting the needs of our students and of our employees. Thank you for your considerable work, commitment, and dedication. Given that we have been continuously challenged by the pandemic for over twenty months, your efforts to keep our university moving have been nothing short of remarkable.

Over the past number of weeks, we have spent much time and focus planning the safe return of students to campus and the classroom while also looking to ensure that our plans present the safest possible environment for our employees. Our recently hosted virtual information sessions produced several great questions/comments that helped to advance some of our operational approaches and plans and in this regard, we would like to take this time to hear from you:

- Are there aspects of the return of students to in-person classes and a return to on-campus work you are you concerned about?
- Are there specific elements of the return plans that need to be better communicated/emphasized?
- Have those that report to you raised any concerns with the return plans?
