

Undergraduate/B.Ed. Research Assistant Opportunity

We are looking for a Bachelor of Education or undergraduate or student at StFX to join a SSHRC-funded research project focused on decolonizing classroom assessment.

The project, Decolonizing Classroom Assessment: Co-Developing and Piloting a Locally Grounded Mi'kmaq Assessment Framework, brings together Mi'kmaq educators, education leaders, Knowledge Keepers, and researchers to collaboratively explore what classroom assessment might look like when grounded in Mi'kmaq ways of knowing and being.

The Research Assistant will support different aspects of the project, including but not limited to organizing research materials, helping with research and professional learning activities, supporting qualitative data collection, and contributing to the development and sharing of project resources. There may also be opportunities to contribute to conference presentations and publications.

This opportunity would be well suited to a student interested in Indigenous education, classroom assessment, decolonizing education, community-engaged research, or graduate studies. Previous research experience is not required. Mi'kmaq students are particularly encouraged to apply.

Rate of pay: $20/hour

Hours: Flexible and will be arranged around the student's academic schedule.

Interested students are invited to send a short expression of interest and résumé/CV to Dr. Alice Johnston at ajohnsto@stfx.ca. Informal inquiries are welcome and interviews will be held.
